CHOATE'S TURN NOW. NOT MAKING A GOLD CORNER. BROOKLY

He Answers Mr. Olney and Assails Syndicate Said to Be Guarding the Income Tax Law.

Meere's Attorneys Not Allowed to Little Danger of a Depletion of the Deliver an Cral Argument.

When Mr. Choate Finished Court Adjourned Until Monday.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 8 .- The argument in the Income Tax cases as the attraction of the Supreme Court case, but that no oral argument could be heard.

Mr. Choate then began the second instalment of his argument with a brief reply to some of the suggestions of the Attorney-General.

He first took up for examination the argument of the Atorney-General that if the decision in regard to rentals was to stand there could be no limit of the time the exemption should run. The Attorney-General had pleaded that with such a ruling in force it might be impossible to ever tax the proceeds derived from rents, however they might be invested.

expended in the civil war a very small proportion had been derived from the income tax, which was in operation at the time.

Taking up the thread of his affirmative argument, Mr. Choate declared that the question of taxation had been one of the most prominent in the minds of the most prominent in the minds of the Revolution, and that it had been the cause of maintaining it. Consequently the uppermost thought in their mind was to fraine an instrument of government which would carefully guard the interests of the people in this respect.

In discussing the nature of a direct tax, Mr. Choate contended that there had never been a suggestion of difference between a tax on the body of real estate and the income from real estate in the matter of indirectness. Further on Justice Harian asked Mr. Choate if he meant by a general tax on personal property, a tax on all personal property of every kind.

"Not all," Mr. Choate repied, "because I admit the right of exemption," Justice Harian—Isoes a tax law that reaches only a part of personal property and the government levies on the general body of citizens, except inmates of tenement, not excepting the exemption. It is a fax that cannot be shifted, and a tax that cannot be avoided.

Mr. Choate concluded his argument at 2 oclock, and the court adjourned their Marchael and the court adjourned their beautiful monday next.

of the United States to-day, and the eminent New York lawyer drew many more people to the Capitol to listen to his eloquence than the limited capacity of the court-room could accommodate.

There was a long line of walting applicants for admission stretching from the outer door of the court to the rotunda, when the Justices filed into the bench on the stroke of 12.

In the section of seats over at the left of the bench, the ladies of the Supreme Court circle, made a bright patch of color against the white walls, and the semi-circular space allotted to members of the last Congress.

His precious metal wherever it can obtain it is in the setting health in this gold is being acquired to use in purchasing new bonds.

A prominent Treasury official said this morning, when asked for his opinion: "While I know the syndicate is getting held of jots of gold, I do not believe in the new bond end of the story. Under list agreement the syndicate bound it series to be new bond end of the story. Under list agreement the syndicate bound it series to ensure the surface until the completion of its contract, which will be about September.

"It still owes the Treasury some thirteen millions in gold—an amount sufficient to bring the reserve above the limit, or to about $100,000,000. Therefore, the Government has not got to worry any on the score of its gold reserve being depleted for months to come.

Before the argument had begun, Attorney-General Dincy meved the admission to the Supreme Court Bar of Mr.

J. Wailer Blandford, the private secretary to the Attorney-General, and the Clerk administered the oath to Mr.

Blandford.

Attorney Shellabarger, of the firm of Shellabarger & Wilson, which represented the apeilamt in the Moore case, asked for keye to deliver a brief oral argument in that case after Mr.

Choate's plea, asserting that Mr.

Choate's plea, asserting that Mr.

Moore's attorneys had not made any oral presentation of his case before a full bench, and thought they were entitled to that privilege.

It apparently came as somewhat of a surprise to the Court, and a brief consultation, was held by the Chief-Justice with 'a associates, after which he told Mr. shellabarger that it would be quite impossible for the Court to grant the request.

He added that the present hearing was being conducted upon a special order, and said; could not be interferred with by giving attention to any other matter. He stated that leave had already been given to file briefs in the Moore case, but that no oral argument could be heard.

Mr. Choate then began the second instalment of his argument with a prief.
